ABSTRACT

An internally splined component for transmitting torque and the method of producing the same wherein the splines are cold formed to predetermined tolerances.